

For Immediate Release

NEW WOOLSTON TRACK ON THE HORIZON

Hot off the back of his latest single “I Believe In You”, Kiwi musician Peter Woolston is set to release the title track from his latest album, Hope On My Horizon.

But “Hope On My Horizon” doesn’t hope to earn a Kiwi musician local or international acclaim; its sole purpose is to raise money and awareness for Mercy Ships, a world-class floating hospital that provides life-changing medical care to thousands of people living in Africa – for free.

In 2014 Woolston stepped aboard Mercy Ships NZ as their Musical Ambassador. As part of his new role, Woolston is ‘rocking the boat’ by donating 50% of all sales of the title track from his new album to the floating hospital.

If you feel like the track sounds a little familiar, you’re not wrong. Woolston gave fans a sneak peek by releasing the video a few months back. The video takes viewers behind the scenes of an actual Mercy Ship, and offers up a real – often confronting and incredibly humbling – picture of the staggering need and desperation of third world people who don’t have access to the medical care the Western world takes for granted.

Mercy Ships is Africa’s medical God-send. Since 1978, the floating hospital has performed more than one billion dollars’ worth of life-changing medical services on hundreds of thousands of the world’s poorest people – all for free.

Yup, you read that right. Mercy Ships is powered by voluntary medical professionals from more than 40 nations all over the world, including New Zealand. The crew pay their way and perform vital – often life-saving – medical services including cleft lip and palate corrections, cataract removals, straightening of crossed eyes, and orthopaedic and facial reconstruction, all at no charge to the patient.

But nothing comes for free these days – and that’s where Woolston comes in.

“When I first discovered Mercy Ships, I was dumbfounded at the selflessness of the people who volunteer their time, effort and world-class skills to the people of Africa,” he says. “We live in a time where it’s not common to see that kind of selflessness anymore; people are too caught up in their own lives to really notice what’s going on in other parts of the world.

“It got me thinking, though. I’m not a doctor so it’s not like I can donate a few months of my time to performing life-changing surgeries. I’m a musician. What can I possibly do to help Mercy Ships?”

“When Mercy Ships NZ invited me aboard their mission as their Musical Ambassador, I couldn’t say no. Finally, here was an opportunity for me to donate my time, effort and skills to Mercy too.”

Drawing comparisons to artists like Jon Foreman, Bono and Martin Smith, Hope On My Horizon counts its blessings and sees the glass as half full rather than half empty. If the title track doesn’t quench your thirst for new insightful Kiwi music, the full album will be released later this month.

For more information about Mercy Ships, visit www.mercyships.org. For more information about Peter Woolston and Hope On My Horizon, visit www.peterwoolstonmusic.com/hopeonmyhorizon.

ENDS

About Mercy Ships

Since 1978, Mercy Ships has performed more than $1 billion worth of free medical services, directly impacting more than 2.35 million of the world’s poorest people. Mercy Ships providing surgeries, dental work, well drilling, and other capacity building services free of charge to the most destitute in West Africa’s most impoverished nations, and all volunteers pay their own way. Mercy Ships has 16 national offices worldwide, including one in Auckland. More information at www.mercyships.org

Mercy Ships have:

- Performed 74,400+ life-changing operations such as cleft lip and palate, cataract removal, straightening of crossed eyes, orthopaedic and facial reconstruction. All operations are free to patients.
- Treated over 608,200+ patients in village medical and dental clinics and educated about 5,850 local health care workers, who have in turn trained multiple thousands in primary health care.
- Trained over 34,500 local professionals in their areas of expertise, including anaesthesiology, midwifery, instrument sterilisation, orthopaedic and reconstructive surgery, and leadership.
- Completed over 1,100 community development projects focusing on water and sanitation, education, infrastructure development and agriculture.

About Peter Woolston

Peter Woolston has loved music since he was about 10 years old. Originally from Wellington but now based in Auckland with his family, Woolston has performed all over New Zealand and throughout the world, including the US, China, Bulgaria, Romania and Russia. Influenced by bands like U2, Switchfoot, The Police and Larry Norman, Woolston has studied under teachers like Pat Pattison and Jason Blume, completed a Certificate in Songwriting at Boston’s Berklee College of Music, and produced distinctive melodic and guitar-powered alternative rock.